

We are happy to relaunch Global Health Online after few years of inactivity. In my new role as International Ambassador of Pharmacy Education, I have been delegated the responsibility of overseeing the publication of this journal.

Articles to this issue has been contributed from three different continents.

Dr. Bhagavathula talks about the evolution of clinical pharmacy program in Ethiopia; Dr. Wright compares pharmacy education in US and India; Drs Seeger and Smith, share their thoughts on why India, with a much larger population, doesn't have a serious opioid crisis, and Mr. Bhatta shares his warfarin clinic experience during his advanced pharmacy practice rotation in US.

I certainly hope that the articles in this issue will expand your knowledge and, in the future, you will be able to share your experience and expertise in various aspects of global health with the readers of this journal.

Publication in this journal is completely free and I look forward to your contribution.

Editor,

M. Chandra Sekar, RPh., PhD., FAPhA